  9. Flat slab in body of church. Here lieth ..... Daniel THORP ..... the late ..... Mary late wife of Daniel ..... departed this life on the 11th ? Jan 17??. (presumably the inscription was difficult to read even then).
  10. Flat slab. There has been a large brass? On this slab which is near the site of the altar rails.

Flat slab in chancel. (this is recorded in different handwriting and so is possibly the missing inscription from tomb 10). Here lieth interr'd the body of Richard THORP of Hopton in the parish of Mirfield, Gent, mors quod mortale est habes et immortale habet sublime coelum – vir probe, proaesclore, pietate, charitate, doctrina culte, et bonis moribus placide quiescis; dum sonet laudes anima divinas, dum sonunt tua facta vere pia – serius aut citius nobis sequendum est– Sic praeparata sit nobis anima sic moriemur terque beati obiit Jan 27 1713 Aetat suce 75. NB the upper part of this slab was found in the cellar of a house at Lee Green in the Spring of 1884 having been removed when the church was rebuilt in 1825. The stone was repaired and the inscription recut at the cost of E B W BALME esq who caused the stone to be placed on the site of the chancel of the old church. (the following translation originally appeared in the parish magazine. Thou Death hath what is mortal, but the high heaven hath the immortal. O upright distinguished, versed in piety, charity, learning and in good morals, calmly thou restest, while thy soul is chanting divine praises, While thy truly pious deeds are sounding, Sooner or later we must follow, May our souls have been prepared thus, So shall we died thrice blessed.)

- Mr Richard Thorp senior buried on ye 30th day January 1712/13
